Library's Butterfly Garden

by Linda Boland, Michigan State University Extension Master Gardener and Library volunteer.

Monarch Caterpillar on Common Milkweed

The Butterfly Garden was planted in the spring of 2016 and serves our butterfly and pollinator population by meeting the needs of these animals at each stage of life. Groundcover and foliage from plants such as Mistflower, Little Bluestem, and Rainbow Chard offer shade, shelter, and protection from predators. Plants in the garden were specifically chosen as hosts for the butterflies in their larval stage, when hungry caterpillars are busy munching on leaves such as mint, dill, parsley, and Wild Columbine.

Plenty of nectar sources were planted to ensure that adults have an abundance and variety of food such as Coneflower, Bee Balm, and Goldenrod. With four different milkweed varieties, the Monarch butterfly specifically benefits from the garden, as it sustains the species throughout its life cycle. In fact, the first year the garden bloomed (spring/summer 2016) several Monarch caterpillars were spotted!

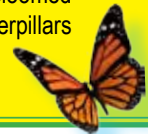

Imperial Moth on Rainbow Chard

No pesticides or herbicides are used in the garden, so natural predators are a welcome sight! Here, a Praying Mantis climbs on Mistflower.

Many other animals are taking advantage of the garden's offerings: in early spring 2016 a female Wood Duck made a nest between the clumps of tall grass; Goldfinches and other birds enjoy feeding on seeds of the flowering plants (they don't seem to mind when people are working in the garden just a few inches away); Praying Mantises help with pest control, as do the toads that rest under the leaves of the Wild Ginger; and then there are the humans that pick the herbs and vegetables. Shortly after its creation, the garden was certified as a Wildlife Habitat by the National Wildlife Federation. This season the garden will be getting new plant labels, a new tree, and plenty of new plants for the butterflies and other pollinators to enjoy!

Jackie's Book Club

Join your friends and neighbors for a lively, informal adult book discussion on the first Wednesday of each month at 1:00pm. Pick up a copy of the books before the discussion dates.

New! Adult Summer Reading Program

Here's how it works: For adults ages 18 and up

U Pick up a Bingo sheet at the library. (at the June 2 Kickoff Party or any time after)

U Each square has a different thing to do or read at the library.

U Mark off each square as your complete it.

U Each time you complete a Bingo, bring your sheet to the front desk to receive a small prize, and be entered in a drawing to win a larger prize.

Keep reading! More Bingos = more chances to win!

The last day to enter is Saturday, July 29.

Winners will be announced on Tuesday, August 1.
